

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention effectively transforms any broadband-connected computer into a DNS addressable information publisher. The invention inverts the current server-centric web-publishing model and extends the reach of the DNS system to any user accessing the Internet. Subscribers may directly serve content from their own computers to requesting users accessing websites of the subscribers using a standard web browser interface.